I think asking her to talk to experts makes sense.

When it comes to privilege, she can confirm with her sources this the kind of thing the department has a lot of experience handling and does so all the time when it comes to search warrants.

Hi!

Sorry to bother on a Saturday night.

Sources familiar tell me that the boxes that the FBI seized (on the final page of the property receipt from the search of Trump's home at Mar-a-Lago) were filled with records covered by attorney-client privilege.

The sources say it is unclear, at this point, if that information is communications between the former president and his private attorneys, or White House counsel; or if it is information covered instead by executive privilege; or a combination.

Sources also tell me that former President Trump's legal team requested that an independent, special master be appointed to comb through those records, but sources tell me that request has been denied, and the records are being reviewed by the Justice Department and the FBI.

My deadline on this is 9:15pm.

Thank you so much.
